The tradition of storing and protecting documents and papers is not a new fashion in Iran. The pieces which are preserved from the ancient archives of Iran in Tabriz, Tabīyān, Bush and other cities show that Iranians used to be concerned with saving identification documents in all their history. The identity documents are indicative of the culture and identity of people of any country and are one of the ways to transfer their culture and identity to the future generations to provide them with the means for more familiarity with their ancestors and to approach to their national identity. There are great figures in the cultural treasure of any country who used to live in that country and had significant effects on the political, cultural, scientific, social and religious changes of that country. A review of their ancient historical, formal and cultural events, enables a person to find many valuable lessons that could be regarded as models for the young generation of today and the future. Since the invention of alphabet and ease in writing, the development registry and recording events and accidents, the identity documents have also been considered to be one of the most important historical resources. Recording civil status has been one of the duties of Civil Status Registration Organization as a governmental organization. This organization has pursued its duties in the past century by recording more than one hundred and twenty million (120,000,000) identity documents. The first birth certificate belonged to M. Fatemeh Morsadi who was born in 1954 in Sangan village in Nishapur in Khorasan. The recording of the identity documents of great figures of the country:

1. Creation of a database of the identity documents of great figures
2. Establishment and reinforcement of understanding among various ethnic groups and showing their shares in the Iranian culture and civilization as well as Islamic Revolution
3. The possibility of performing researches for studies and research centers

In view of the efforts of the time endowed president of State Civil Status Organization, on the identification and collecting the identity documents of great figures, this important task was put in the agenda in the 2010 Book under the topic of “Research on the identity documents of the Figures book”.

Method of collecting identity documents data of figures

Many studies have been already conducted in historical and cultural books in collecting that data and a large number of the resources and references in connecting with this subject have been used. To achieve this decision, effective interaction was reached with relevant organization. In this line, the figures in different subjects including authorities, clergymen, governmental and political, cultural, artistic, scientific, sports and martyrs figures across the country, in the process of an organized plan were identified, the data about them was collected and their identities were
